THE MACALLAN

The Macallan distillery was founded by Alexander Reid, a barley farmer and schoolteacher.

The original name of this area was "Maghellan," derived from the Gaelic word "magh," meaning "fertile ground," and "Ellan," in reference to the monk St. Fillan, who had a close connection to the church that stood on the land of The Macallan Estate until around 1400.

Farmers in the Speyside region had been making whisky on their farms for centuries, using surplus barley during the quieter winter months.
