

Touch of Grace

Far beyond Buenos Aires lies Argentina's Calchaquí Valley, where russet desert contrasts with vineyards that produce some of the world's most renowned highland wines, and a tantalising mix of adventure and gastronomy is on offer.

Here the legend of the gauchos, those masterful horsemen of the pampas, runs deep, reminding visitors that this is a landscape only recently tamed. It is in this setting that spa resort Grace Cafayate rises from a sea of green vineyards like an ochre centrepiece. The hotel, spa and villa development is in the secluded 505-hectare estate of La Estancia de Cafayate, renowned for its wine, golf and equestrian pursuits. Since opening in 2013, the resort has laid the natural wonders of the area at its guests' doors, with 52 rooms and suites within the hotel, and standalone villas offering picturesque views of the Andean peaks that ring the valley. Wellbeing is a focus, and wine and gourmet food are top attractions for the hotel's discerning visitors. In the Wine Bar, vintages and blends from across Argentina are showcased in comfort before a wood-burning fire or on the open-air terrace. Executive Chef Javier Robles also offers a five-course tasting menu matched exclusively with wines from Cafayate, notably Torrontes, Malbec and Cabernet Sauvignon varieties.
